“The protein from Spirulina can be an absolute breakthrough for the food industry”

AlgaEurope is a unique conference that helps not only to get useful information in the Algae Biomass industry, but also to see and even taste the latest inventions!
AlgaEurope 2022 is glad to announce its Bronze Sponsor – Livegreen!

Livegreen is the leading biotech company in Italy for the cultivation of microalgae and for the development of cost-effective technological solutions, in line with the most stringent sustainability parameters.

Livegreen has recently developed the process of extraction of protein from Spirulina. The result is a new, innovative product that can be supplied to the Food and Beverage industry, thanks to its nutritional content, rich of all essential aminoacids.

The protein from Spirulina can be an absolute breakthrough for the food industry, as it can effectively substitute not just protein sources like meat, allowing a higher degree of sustainability, but also those other protein sources - like soybean and peas - that are used for producing vegan burgers, fake meat or other kinds of meat alternatives with high protein content.

The limited amount of resources needed for the production of this special kind of protein and the limited impact that their production have in terms of negative externalities are just two of the aspects that this new ingredient can be beneficial for the whole world of food production.

Livegreen has also found a way to make this incredible protein source tasteless and colorless, allowing its utilization for every kind of product, regardless the limitations given by the chromatic aspects.
